ENGLISH MANNER OF COLLECTING TAXES IN INDIA .- The London Iudia News gives an acrather devastation in that quarter of the globe. The substance is, that the headman of one of the villages refused to pay his taxes, and sent word to Capt. James, the English collector, that he might come and get the money if he could. Whereupon Capt. James issued a writ of execution in the form of a regiment of soldiers, which was served, not merely upon the headman himself, but upon the village which he governed, and several other villages in its ueighborhood, and, (in the language of the old English law) not finding sufficient distress to satisfy the exe cution, they made it, by burning the towns and murdering several ecores of the population. While this work was going on, they took care to conect the taxes, amounting to some thirty nounds, and thereafter retired with their booty, leaving smoking mins and blackened corpses behind them.
